This chapter discusses the differences between contributory and comparative negligence. Each of the four following questions is worth 25% of this week's assignment grade.

1-If the jury finds you to be 75% at fault in the incident, which theory would you prefer was applicable and why? (Remember, they can countersue to recoup for their losses at the percentage at which you are found responsible!)

2-What if the jury finds you to be only 2% at fault? Which theory would you prefer was applicable then and why?

3-Which theory of negligence does South Carolina follow? Contributory or comparative? If comparative, is it pure comparative negligence or modified comparative negligence?

4-Which theory of negligence does North Carolina follow? Contributory or comparative? If comparative, is it pure comparative negligence or modified comparative negligence?
